Disenco Ltd was established in 2003 to continue the development and commence the commercialisation of a revolutionary m-CHP (Micro Combined Heat and Power) appliance to be distributed to the worldwide market for the generation of local small-scale electricity production in connection with the provision of domestic heat and hot water.

Creativesheffield were introduced to Disenco in 2004 by LIFE, the UK's first low carbon technology accelerator, in order to assist the company in identifying development and production facilities in the Sheffield region which would provide a base for monitoring existing field trial appliances and managing the commercialisation programme.

Creativesheffield provided a range of property options based on the specification provided by Disenco and assisted in negotiations between the company and property owners. Creativesheffield also brokered an introduction to a grant support consultant in order to successfully apply for an Objective One Inward Investment Grant.

Creativesheffield's in-house HR Business Consultant and Relocation Expert provided recruitment support and details of availability of funding for training and identified residential accommodation for engineers relocating from Norway to Sheffield.

Disenco located in Unit J, Sheffield Business Park, Europa Link in 2005.

Creativesheffield are continuing to work with Disenco to identify funding incentives for the commercialisation of their product and to facilitate networking opportunities and are continuing to provide property and recruitment advice.

Alan Dale (COO) says:

"Creativesheffield has helped and supported Disenco from its infancy and continues to work with the business through its commercial phase. Creativesheffield's knowledge in all areas of business is second to none, the staff are highly skilled, always helpful and totally motivated, a credit to their organisation. I would recommend to any Sheffield business".
